EXACT REPLICA Army Grenade

(AS USED IN HAND COMBAT)

Yes, this is your chance to be the first in your neighborhood to have this realistic "weapon". It's an exact replica of the one used by the army and our marines in fierce hand-to-hand combat, to wipe out machine-gun nests, demolish trenches, "get" concealed snipers, defend against massed attack.

Just cock the firing mechanism, load the cap and you're ready! Imagine — you're a marine creeping up on that machine-gun nest, your grenade is in your hand. You creep close, low. Now you're in range, you pull the safety pin with your teeth and throw! Bull's eye, right into the nest. Blast! The machine gun flies out broken. Now silence. Your buddies cheer — the advance starts up again!

This grenade explodes 4 seconds after pulling pin as it strikes ground. Can't break. Heavy gauge steel firing mechanism. Uses standard caps. Can be exploded over and over. Comes complete with throwing instructions. (Parents: This toy grenade is completely harmless!) Clip ad, write your name and address clearly in margin and send it with $1.00 plus 25¢ shipping charge — cash, check or money order to:

DOMINO

DAN

Dan Julin was seated peacefully behind the desk in his office. At the given moment it looked as though the owner of the Big Drink Cafe didn't have a solitary worry in the world. There was a big grin on his face as he was playing dominoes with himself. The door of his office opened and his wife, Doty, walked in and watched her husband as he was engaged in his usual pastime.

"Sometimes I think that you like those little dominoes more than your own wife," she commented dryly.

"At least they never bother me nor keep on asking me for money," he replied without moving his eyes away from the table. "What's on your mind?"

"I guess you heard that the Pinkerton man, Steve Lerner, is in town. He has been with Sheriff Ben Gordon for more than an hour — first place he visited when he came in on the stage from St. Louis. And there's talk in town that this Pinkerton man feels that whoever held up the stagecoach is right here?"

"In that last respect he is right, my dear," said Dan. "But why worry? There isn't the slightest chance in the world that he can connect me with the sad event. The money is safely hidden and when the time comes we'll get it."

"But you must split it with Pete Russell and Jim Nash," his wife pointed out. "One hundred and fifty thousand dollars broken into three piles doesn't make too much. Now if they just weren't around then we would have all of it."

"That isn't a very original thought," commented her husband as he pushed the pile of dominoes to the side of his desk. "You can be certain that this thought is also occupying the minds of Pete and Jim. There's not the slightest doubt in the world that they would have double-crossed me long ago, except that they figure I alone know how to get rid of these national bank notes in South America. We never figured that the serial numbers would be distributed around the country."

There was a knock on the door and Dan recognized it and told his bartender, Mike Garvey to come inside.

"There's a fellow outside who wants to see you," said Mike. "Carrying two guns so you can figure out what he might be."

"Either a faker or a deadly killer," replied Dan. "Show him in, and my dear wife, I think you better leave us alone."

The stranger was a thin youngish looking man with freckles over his face. He certainly didn't look very fearsome.

"I'm Jack Sawyer," he said by way of introduction. And that was enough, for it tagged him at once as the younger brother of the late Harry Sawyer who was one of the prominent gamblers of that era.

"Welcome to town and what can I do for you?" asked Dan.

The youngish looking man took a paper from him pocket and glanced at it.

"I'm sole heir of my late brother's estate,"

STATEMENT REQUIRED BY THE ACT OF AUGUST 12, 1913, AS AMENDED BY THE ACT OF MARCH 3, 1925, AND JULY 1, 1931, THAT THE UNITED STATES GOVERNMENT KNOWS THE OVERSEAS, MANAGEMENT AND CIRCULATION OF.

CHARLES F. FORD, President, Secretary of the Overseas, Editor, Manager, Officer, and Business Manager of the Overseas, New York, N.Y.

he explained. "According to this sheet you owe him two hundred dollars. He loaned it to you five years ago."

"Suppose I denied it?" challenged Dan.

"Then I would call you a dirty liar," was the unexpected reply. "And don't go for the gun you probably have underneath the desk. If it comes to shooting, I can outshoot any person in this section of the country. But don't worry, I won't shoot you unless you tried to go for me. Gambling debts are legal yet. So I'd sue, first."

Dan did some quick thinking. He got up from his desk and simply said to Harry Sawyer one short command.

"Follow me."

The two went inside the bar and Dan took six glasses from the counter.

"We go outside," he suggested. "I'll throw these up into the air. Three at a time. Hit 'em all before they come down and I'll pay you five times the debt."

"It's a deal," smiled the young man.

The street was empty at that time of the day. Dan threw the glasses up. He just didn't believe what he heard or saw. But within a minute the street was crowded. Sheriff Ben Gordon came over to inquire what had happened. Dan explained.

"You might have picked a better place for that shooting. But let's see if you pay."

Dan went inside and soon returned with the money which he gave to Jack Sawyer. He figured he could use such a sharpshooter.

"Come around to see me tonight," he suggested. "I have a deal that might interest you."

"I'll be around," was the laconic reply.

And that evening Jack Sawyer came. The place was full of men who were gambling. He went into the private office and Dan came right to the point.

"I'll put you on the payroll. One hundred dollars a week."

"What do I do for that money," Jack Sawyer wanted to know.

"Let's say that the time will come when you may have to work for it. But until that time, just hang around."

The next three weeks were uneventful. Except for the fact that the Pinkerton man still was in town. Contrary to expectations, he didn't visit anybody. Nor did he ask any questions. He just would go to the sheriff's office every day for an hour. Then return to his hotel.

"He's got some kind of a game but I can't figure it out," snarled Pete to his boss.

"Suppose we let him make the first move," suggested Dan as he concentrated playing with his dominoes. "If anything goes wrong, we have Jack with us."

It was about ten o'clock that Friday night that things did go wrong. Dotty Julin rushed into the office and told her husband the news.

"Charlie Maron is out there treating everybody. He has a big wad of new fifty dollar National Bank Notes — on the bank in Boston."

Dan turned a deadly pale white as he looked at one of the notes his wife handed him.

"Furthermore he said there were lots more where he got these," she added.

"Get Pete, Jim, and Jack," he ordered. "I'm riding out to the hiding place. Something went wrong."

Soon the four men rode away at a gallop from the back of the place. They went south out of town and then cut across the mountain range. A hard two hour ride brought them to a spot near which there was a big boulder.

"You watch and have those guns of yours ready," said Dan to Jack. "We dig."

Frantically Pete and Jim dug up the ground about fifty paces north of the big boulder. They then raised a large wooden box with a padlock on it and lifted it up to the ground. Dan took a key from his pocket and opened the lock. He glanced at the packages of hills and counted them.

"There isn't one missing," he commented. "Something is wrong."

"Could be a trap," suggested Pete. "And we walked right into it."

It was a perfect bit of logical reasoning. For no sooner had he uttered those words when the voice of the sheriff shouted:

"I have fifteen men with me. You better give up. Don't be a fool and fight."

"Shoot 'em," shouted Dan to Jack. "Now is the time to earn your money."

Jack Sawyer looked at the well armed men surrounding them and laughed.

"So we kill a few or wound them. But they get us. This isn't a good deal. Count me out. I say we surrender."

It made good sense and soon all, including Jack Sawyer, were taken prisoners. The men were escorted to the sheriff's office and put into separate cells. All except Jack Sawyer, who was given back his guns.

"I don't get this," pleaded the Pinkerton man. "Something doesn't add up in this case."

"Allow me to introduce you to Jack Sawyer of the United States Secret Service," laughed the sheriff. "Everyone thought you were working on the case. All the while you were trying to find those lost mine papers. We didn't want to give away Jack's identity. So he went out of town by a separate escort. He figured on making that gang get scared by giving the notes to Charlie Maron to spend. Clever, no?"

"Clever, yes," replied the Pinkerton man. "Maybe he can help me find those mine papers."
